ILD TELESERVICES LAUNCHES WEBSITE TO HELP CONSUMERS UNDERSTAND THEIR PHONE BILL

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, FL May 20, 2009 — ILD Teleservices, a leading provider of alternative payment services, including bill to phone Local Exchange Carrier (LEC) billing services, today launched a new consumer website to help visitors learn more about bill to phone payment and find answers to question about charges processed by ILD.

The user-friendly site (www.ildteleservices.com) is the outcome of an extensive effort by ILD to identify and respond to leading consumer concerns about bill to phone services. To that end, the site helps consumers find answers to billing questions, offers a variety of tips and tools about how to get information, and includes a clear path for consumers to report and resolve billing issues. Resources such as a 24-hour Resolution Center and an ILD consumer concerns blog are among the features ILD has developed for the new site.

“We’ve spent a significant amount of time working with consumers in an effort to identify their primary concerns about bill to phone services,” noted Dennis Stoutenburgh, President and COO of ILD. “This new site represents our most recent effort to address those concerns in a careful and comprehensive manner. We plan to continue to serve not only as a leading alternative payment provider but as the go-to consumer resource for information about our industry.”

The new website—along with the establishment of best practices for its merchant clients—marks a major step in ILD’s ongoing effort to take the lead in the alternative payments industry and LEC billing. Consumers are invited to provide feedback to ILD about the site, their customer experiences, and issues they would like to see addressed in future initiatives.
